The Power of Starting Before You're Ready vs. The "Hell Yes" Rule

Vikas Surani

Hello Curious Minds,

We've all been there—stuck between taking action and waiting for the perfect moment. But here's the paradox: Success often comes from starting before you feel ready, yet at the same time, some of the best decisions come from following the "Hell Yes" rule. 🤔

💡 When to Start Before You're Ready

Most breakthroughs happen when you take action despite uncertainty.

Jeff Bezos launched Amazon before e-commerce was mainstream. He started in a garage, knowing that online retail would grow, but without certainty about how. Now, Amazon is worth over $1.5 trillion.

Brené Brown's TED Talk on vulnerability went viral, but she almost didn't do it because she felt unprepared. Today, it's one of the most-watched TED Talks of all time, proving that the best moves often come from stepping into discomfort.

Michael Jordan was cut from his high school basketball team. He didn't wait to "feel ready"—he trained harder, eventually becoming a six-time NBA champion.

If you're waiting to feel fully ready, you might be waiting forever. Start now, learn on the go. 🚀

🔥 When to Apply the "Hell Yes" Rule

On the flip side, not every opportunity deserves your time. If it's not a "Hell Yes!", it's a no.

📄 Warren Buffett's secret to success? Saying no. He's rejected over 90% of opportunities that didn't align with his core investment strategy. That discipline has built Berkshire Hathaway into a $800 billion company.

🎸 Derek Sivers, entrepreneur and musician, created the "Hell Yes" Rule after realizing that saying yes to lukewarm opportunities led to regret. His advice? If something doesn't excite you, walk away—because every "yes" takes time away from a better opportunity.

📖 Steve Jobs famously said no to many product ideas to focus on a few game-changers. Apple's success wasn't about doing more—it was about doing less, but better.

🚀 The Sweet Spot

The key is knowing when to take the leap and when to step back.

✅ A bold new challenge? Start before you're ready. ❌ A commitment that drains you? If it's not a Hell Yes, it's a No.

🔥 Your Turn

What's one thing you've been overthinking? Are you waiting for the perfect moment—or is it time to say "Hell Yes" or walk away? Drop your thoughts in the comments!

Until next time, Vikas Surani ✨
